

robobees

Scientists are attempting to design a robot with the ability to see and smell like a bee in order to act as an artificial pollinator! The idea is that the robobees will be able to independently identify certain flowers and pollinate accordingly. It's an amazing feat of technology (if they succeed) but we'll take the real deal any day of the week!